CRIMINAL INTELLIGENCE AND ITS ROLE IN THE MODERN MODEL OF POLICE ACTION

Kostadina Klechkaroska

Abstract

Reasoning the inevitability of introducing criminal intelligence as one of the conditions for successful management of sophisticated forms of crime that has gripped our country, based on the many fundamental weaknesses that originated from The former practical dealings with the same phenomenon. Organised crime poses a serious threat to developed countries, but it is observed as a special challenge in our country too, as one of the transitional societies in which the early nineties perform constitutional and legal reform of socio-economic and political system. Changing the system of values, culture and above all leaving the one-party system of the market introduction of pluralism were to the emergence of new forms of organized crime. Existing methods and tools for preventive-repressive combat phenomenal new forms of organized crime were not enough to deal efficiently and its reduction. The incorporation of certain elements of the British model, and experiences of other foreign policy solely more guarantees strong commitment of the Macedonian police to be built as a modern, development and success in dealing with contemporary security challenges and threats. Criminal intelligence as a novelty in systematic-strategic approach preventive repressive fight against organized crime in the country is one of the key products of the process of reform of the Ministry of Interior as noted in its effects are evident in Macedonian Police model. A key role in the development of criminal intelligence is adopting the national intelligence database and its application, especially in the exchange of data, which overcomes the existing problems in inter-institutional cooperation. Thus creating conditions for rapid exchange and processing of data, while enabling rapid communication and interoperability with databases of foreign national and international bodies, institutions and organizations that have responsibilities in detection and prosecution of offenders.

Keywords: criminal intelligence, organized crime, preventive anti-oppressive, police model.

Podaci o autoru

Ime i prezime autora: Kostadina Klechkaroska
Institucija: St. Clement of Ohrid University, Bitola, Faculty of Security
E-mail adresa: jkleckaroskakostadina@gmail.com